City opens door for 300 jobs

By Mike Myers
Staff writer

GRANITE CITY — In return for a promise of up to 300 jobs, the city agreed last night to loan the former Koetting Ford complex on Madison Avenue to a plastic recycler for one year.

In a special City Council meeting, the aldermen voted 10-9 to loan the property to the former Koetting Ford complex.

The city acquired the property as part of the deal that moved Koetting Ford's Novaty Chevrolet to the new auto center at Illinois and West Ponton Road.

River City Plastic Recycling, which grinds up used plastic containers and sells the plastic to other manufacturers, now operates in Granite City in a portion of the former Union Starch & Refining Co. complex in West Granite.

It is selling that site to PVO Foods, a food packaging firm, whose present location in Edwardsville will be demolished to make way for the new Madison County Administration Building.

As part of the PVO move to Granite City, the former Union Starch location will be expanded to include a plastic recycling complex. That project is estimated to cost $15 million to $20 million and would eventually include River City and several related manufacturers.

The former Union Starch site was owned by Don Partney of Granite City, but its sale to PVO Foods was expected to be closed this month.

For this reason, River City only wants the Koetting site for one year but needs a commitment by the city this week.

The company plans to move to the former Koetting property by Sept. 1. It plans to immediately hire 10 to 15 people.

The aldermen agreed to loan the building with the following conditions:

- River City is required to place $20,000 in an escrow account that would be refunded when the company permanently locates in the city. It would be defaulted to the city if the company fails to locate here.

- River City will bear the cost of maintenance, insurance and utilities for the building.

- The city will be fully indemnified against loss or damage resulting from any action taken by River City on the site.

- Any alterations to the building must be approved by the City Council prior to being made.

- The loan of the building will be for one year, with possible extensions.

The loan of the building was unanimously recommended by the Downtown Committee. The committee had requested that companies submit proposals for use of the building, and River City submitted the only response.

Second Ward Alderman Jim Miller, chairman of the committee, said that while the city would have preferred a paying tenant, it couldn't realistically turn down 250 to 300 new jobs.

"We're not talking hamburger flippers here," Miller said. "I'm guessing these are in the $8 to $9-an-hour range starting, as opposed to minimum wage."

Miller also stressed the importance to the city of diversifying — attracting manufacturing jobs that are not tied to the steel industry.

The former Koetting location is not zoned for manufacturing, but, according to Miller, the building is owned by the city and the city is exempt from its own zoning ordinance.

He and several other aldermen expressed concern over the City Council earlier this year refusing to grant a zoning change for a recycling center at the former Air Products plant located just two blocks south on Madison Avenue.

Miller, 2nd Ward Alderman Virgil Kambarian and 4th Ward Alderman Jeff Worthen last night called for the zoning at the former Air Products site to be reconsidered at a future meeting.

First Ward Alderman Casmer Skubish and Frank Scarsdale and 5th Ward Aldermen Lloyd Bailey and Ginny O'Beir did not attend the special meeting.

Three leave Haine's office

By John D. Milazzo
Staff writer

EDWARDSVILLE — Three key employees are making their departures from the office of Madison County State's Attorney Bill Haine.

Kit (Walmisley) Morrissey, a felony prosecutor who has handled numerous high-profile sex offense cases, will leave the county staff in September to join the staff of U.S. Attorney Frederick Hess in East St. Louis. She is a former Granite Cityan.

Mark Von Nida, a new administrative assistant to Haine and a campaign worker in Haine's 1988 campaign to unseat former State's Attorney Dick Allen, will assume some of the responsibilities of Don Greer.

Greer was Haine's office manager until July 6. A former city manager and police chief in Wood River, Greer resigned to become chief of police for Crestwood, Mo., effective Aug. 1.

Both Morrissey and Greer have been with Haine since he took office, according to Von Nida, a Granite City native now living in Edwardsville.

Von Nida said there has been "some preliminary discussion" regarding a replacement for Morrissey and that a prosecutor currently employed in the Cook County State's Attorney's Office will join Haine's staff Aug. 1.

He said there has been no decision on what duties the new assistant will be given.

Also leaving is Assistant State's Attorney James Buckley, who handled misdemeanors and driving-under-the-influence cases. Buckley is a former Granite Cityan and will enter private practice with Granite City attorney James E. Wallis.

Von Nida, who until recently had been employed as a paralegal for Haine's former law partner, Wood River attorney Randy Buno, said much of his new responsibility will involve dealing with the press.

With Greer's departure, Von

Nida said, Haine will take a more active hand in daily administration in the office.

Von Nida said staff members in Haine's office see "nothing unusual" in about the departure of the three employees in a relatively short time.

"Summer is traditionally a time in the legal community when a lot of movement occurs," he said. "The workload tends to be lighter, and that gives people the chance to make a move and get acclimated in their new jobs."

Man found shot dead

BROOKLYN — The body of a 32-year-old Granite City man was found Wednesday afternoon in a field near Bend Road.

Ricky J. Muckenstrum of 2500 block of Parkway Drive had reportedly been shot in the head and abdomen and had been dead for more than a day when found. His body located in an unincorporated area of St. Clair County, was found by Brooklyn police at about 3:30 p.m.

Brooklyn police turned the case over to the Division of Criminal Investigation of the Illinois State Police.

Muckenstrum reportedly had an extensive police record and DCI asked area police departments for assistance in its investigation.

No motive for the shooting had been determined Thursday morning.

3-digit weather, 3-digit electric bills

ALTON — Air conditioning is a comfort to the body, but it can be a real pain in the pocketbook.

When temperatures approach triple digits, you can probably expect a triple-digit bill.

And if the utility company serving your area built a nuclear power plant, then expect your bill to be on the higher end of the scale.

A national trend indicates utilities that did not enter the nuclear field tend to have lower rates now, Martin Cohen, associate director of the Citizens Utility Board, said.

Of course, non-nuclear utilities often use coal extensively, leading to air pollution, or rely on buying electrical power from other utilities.

"The price of electrical power that a typical residential customer with air conditioning uses to get through the summer ranges from $103 to $121 a month, a survey of the rates charged by the big three electric utilities in the Alton area showed."

Customers of Illinois Power Co. were at the high end of the range.

In the middle were Union Electric Co. customers.

Those paying the least to stay cool were Central Illinois Public Service Co. customers.

The bills include a flat monthly service charge that ranges from $12 for IP to $5.10 for UE and $3.88 for CIPS.

A typical IP customer with air conditioning uses 1,100 kilowatt hours, spokesman Frank Beaman said.

The total cost, not including taxes, would be $121, he said.

In comparison, a UE customer using the same amount of power would pay $112.50, spokesman Dick McAlenean said, and a CIPS customer would pay $103.25, spokesman Sam Poe said.

All three figures include a basic monthly service or facilities charge and a per-kilowatt-hour price, as well as an average monthly fuel adjustment factor.

The cost of its Clinton nuclear power plant is particularly a factor in IP's rates, Cohen said. The nearly $4 billion cost of building Clinton now accounts for nearly half of its customers' bills, he said.

The cost of building the Callaway nuclear plant near Fulton, Mo., accounts for about 18 percent of the bills of UE's Illinois customers, McAlenean said.

Although the plants are comparable in cost, UE is a larger company than IP and most of its customers live in Missouri, so the rate shock of going nuclear was less on its Illinois customers.

Beaman said half the Clinton cost was a result of changes in government regulations.

A saving in fuel costs over the projected 40-year life of the plant could be a counterbalancing factor, he added.

But Cohen said any fuel savings would never come close to Clinton's construction and maintenance costs.

A complex mathematical formula is used to pass on increases or savings in a utility's fuel costs for its power plants, as reflected in the monthly fuel adjustment clause.

That has resulted in high rate reductions in overall bills for IP and UE customers, while the fuel adjustments clause still results in an increase for CIPS customers, accounting for about 83¢ of a typical customer's $113 summer bill.

But Poe said it is lower than in the past because of renegotiated contracts that reduced coal costs by $10 million over the four years ending this year.

The per-kilowatt-hour cost of energy charged by the three utilities in the summer months covers a wide range.

For IP it is $4 to $9.2 cents, for UE about 9.8 cents and for CIPS about 7.8 cents.

Man slashed, robbed of chain

A man armed with a knife slashed and robbed a Granite City man of a gold chain necklace valued at $1,800, the victim reported at 8:10 p.m. July 6.

Police and an ambulance went to the residence of Steven Harster in the 2800 block of East 25th Street after a stabbing was reported there.

Harster, 29, sustained a small cut on the throat and chest in the incident but declined immediate medical attention.

The victim told police the assailant put a knife to the victim's throat, threatened him and then took the 14K gold chain off his neck.

The suspect left on foot after making further threats to harm Harster and his wife, it was alleged.

Harster said the robber owes him $100 and that he had been trying to collect the money. He said the suspect walked up to him and his wife in the yard, saying he had the money.

While the two men were walking along the side of the house to the front, the suspect grabbed Harster and threatened him with a large knife, the victim said.

Harster said his T-shirt was torn and he also got hit in the face during a scuffle with the assailant. Officers searched the area but were unable to locate the suspect.

ing concerning a disturbance earlier at a Granite City tavern.

At the station, McEntire allegedly poked an officer in the chest and threatened him with his fist and pushed another officer. In addition to the assault and resisting charges, McEntire was issued two traffic summonses for speeding.

Talk hampered, candidate says

By John D. Milazzo

EDWARDSVILLE — John Shimkus, Republican nominee for Madison County treasurer, sees as symbolic the difficulties he encountered last Thursday morning when he tried to hold a press conference in Edwardsville.

Shimkus, a Collinsville resident and a former teacher at Metro East Lutheran High School, had planned the event in a small park on North Main Street in Edwardsville across the street from the county courthouse.

But after setting up a large "Shimkus for treasurer" sign, a podium and a table, he said, he was told by a county official to "get the stuff out of the park" or that he (the official) would have it physically thrown out.

Shimkus said he was in the courthouse making some telephone calls while some of his campaign workers were setting up for the press conference.

When he got to the park, he was met by Paul Hawkins, Madison County building, zoning and environmental control administrator.

Shimkus, who said he checked with a lawyer before the event regarding the legality of holding a press conference in a public park, said Hawkins didn't cite any ordinance or give him other reason for expelling him from the park.

The conference was moved to a sidewalk in front of the park. About that time, county employees began mowing grass nearby and Shimkus had to shout many of his comments over the drone of lawn mowers.

Shimkus said his ejection from the park and the timing of the lawn mowing were symbolic of a lack of political balance in Madison County, where a Republican has not been elected to countywide office in 10 years.

However, Hawkins told reporters in his office following the press conference that there is a County Board policy against displaying political signs or other campaign materials in county public areas.

Hawkins said Shimkus could have conducted the conference in the park but that his materials were not allowed.

Instructions were given by the county board's Buildings Committee earlier in the morning to have the materials removed, Hawkins said.

Also, Thursday is the regular day for the park to be mowed, Hawkins noted.

During his press conference, Shimkus criticized incumbent Treasurer Michael "Mick" Henkhaus, a Democrat, for allegedly poor office management and investment policies.

Citing the county's last audit report, Shimkus said that much of the county money invested by Henkhaus is "unsecured" and that if a financial institution holding those funds were to fail, the county would be unable to recover all of its investments.

Henkhaus said the same audit report goes on to say that Illinois law no longer requires that county funds be secured and that he has confidence in the institutions where money is invested.

Store penalized for mislabeled sandwich meat

By Andy Sjering
 Staff writer

PONTOON BEACH — The proprietor of Leroy's A&J Market, 4088 Pontoon Road, agreed to pay $750 recently to the Illinois Department of Agriculture for selling mislabeled meat.

The proprietor, Jim Luesse, said the investigation that triggered the penalty was instigated by a disgruntled employee. The meatcutters at Leroy's are in the fourth month of a strike against the market.

Luesse's father-in-law wrote U.S. House Majority Leader Dick Gephardt to complain, and Gephardt's staff looked into it.

Gephardt's staff found that the investigation had followed a complaint by a meatcutter in a letter, dated Feb. 15. He had been demoted Feb. 3. The Meatcutters' Union struck Leroy's on March 27.

The man claimed to know two customers who had become ill after eating ham salad from the market. The state had samples of the meat analyzed and determined it contained pork, beef, poultry and food coloring.

Food coloring added to meat constitutes adulteration, a more serious charge, said a state agriculture spokesman. But the finding, negotiated June 21 between Luesse and the state, made no mention of adulteration.

Luesse acknowledges that the meat should have been called sandwich spread, and said he had "corrected the problem" of labeling.

Luesse's wife, Peggy, said she found it hard to believe that, if somebody became sick, they didn't complain to Luesse himself, rather than the meatcutter.

"That's my whole point," Peggy Luesse said, that it did not come from a consumer.

But Phil Perry, an administrative assistant in the IDA's Bureau of compliance and Enforcement, said the agency interviewed and took signed statements from the customers who claimed to have gotten sick.

Jim Luesse said that if somebody had gotten sick, it was probably because it was during a period of time when he was prohibited by union contract from working behind his own meat counter.

In January, Luesse cut the total hours in the meat department by 15 hours. The contract said his time behind the counter had to be the first to go, he said. "I feel that any problems that have arisen were because I had very little control," Luesse said. "All the problems stem from that period of time."

THE LAW AND YOU
 BY RICK REED
 Attorney At Law

Sometimes employees who are injured on the job are reluctant to file a Workers' Compensation claim. In many cases, the employee fears that the employer will terminate him if he files such a claim. An Illinois employee who is fired for exercising his rights under the Workers' Compensation Act can bring suit against the employer for retaliatory discharge.

In one recent case, a woman was hired on a temporary basis to wrap and box assorted candies at a confectionery company in Chicago. She had an accident on the job shortly after she was hired, and she filed a Workers' Compensation claim. Fifteen days after she filed the claim the plaintiff was informed that she was fired.

The worker testifies that she was terminated because she filed the claim. She indicated in her testimony that two of her supervisors had stated this to her. The company, on the other hand, claimed that she was only a temporary employee, and that she knew this from the time she was hired. One of the worker's supervisors testified that the plaintiff was "laid off" as a result of a seasonal decline in production. A jury awarded the plaintiff $65,000 in damages based on a finding that she was fired in retaliation for filing a Workers' Compensation claim.

The Appellate Court reversed the decision of the trial court because they felt there was not sufficient proof that the plaintiff's discharge was "causally related" to the filing of her claim. The appellate court noted that there were no witnesses to the alleged statements of her supervisors that she was fired as a result of the Workers' Compensation claim.

This Appellate Court felt that the record revealed that the plaintiff was "laid off" because of a seasonal decline in production of the company. They felt it was significant that the plaintiff was laid off in the ordinary course of events along with numerous other temporary employees. For all of these reasons, it was felt the evidence was insufficient to support the jury's verdict that the plaintiff was a victim of retaliatory discharge.

Despite the fact that the Appellate Court here decided in favor of the employer, cases like this are important because they recognize the right of the employee to bring an action for retaliatory discharge. An injured employee can feel free to file a Workers' Compensation claim in this situation, that Illinois law will protect him in this situation.

Extend park to Illinois side

On Oct. 28, it will be 25 years since completion of the beautiful, 630-foot-tall Gateway Arch, commemorating the St. Louis area's role as the gateway for western United States exploration and settlement. This would be an ideal time for expansion of the Arch-area park across the Mississippi River and onto the Illinois riverfront.

The idea of extending the area of the Jefferson National Expansion Memorial has been discussed on a number of occasions but never brought to fruition. There seems to be broad support for the proposal and it appears 1990 is the logical time to go forward with it.

With construction of the Metro Link transit line now assured, linking East St. Louis with St. Louis and Lambert Airport, it makes added sense to include the riverfront area in the national park system's Gateway facilities and operations. Tourist access could be greatly simplified through use of Metro Link.

From the start of Gateway planning, Eero Saarinen, designer and architect for the Arch, envisioned landscaping and other improvements for the Illinois side of the Mississippi River. He did not live to see the Arch itself completed, but his concept of an inverted image of a suspended chain — was adhered to by the federal government.

No "mallet" is needed here to complement the "croquet hoop" created by the Arch, but it is obvious that the overall design ought to include both shores. One cannot really view a river without seeing both sides, and one cannot truly appreciate the Arch without taking into account its setting — a shining jewel at the heart of a populous two-state metropolitan region.

A 100-acre tract, free of hazardous waste and free of cost to the government, is part of the proposal, reflecting the depth and breadth of local support for the park expansion. The package is signed, sealed and delivered" but intense activity is planned during the summer and fall to make the site available. Uncle Sam could then proceed with land preparation in the October 1990-September 1991 fiscal year.

Anti-tax question on ballot

Accountability is an often-used word when people talk about governmental costs and services. So it is not surprising that Illinois voters in the Nov. 6 general election can help decide a Tax Accountability Amendment proposed for addition to the 1970 Illinois Constitution.

The issue is adoption of tax increases by the General Assembly. Should the simple majority requirement now in effect be changed to three-fifths?

The Legislature declined to put the question on the ballot, but initiative petitions received enough signatures to assure its inclusion. After the Chicago Bar Association said the proposal failed to qualify as involving Assembly structural or procedural matters, a Chicago judge ruled otherwise on July 9.

Will the state ever need higher taxes in order to provide an adequate level of services? Would 60 percent voting move such a "solution" out of reach? In the 118-member Illinois House, 71 instead of 60 affirmative votes would be needed; in the 56-member Senate, 36 instead of 30.

Whether the change would truly make legislators act with greater accountability is uncertain, but it clearly would make tax hikes harder to achieve. Our guess is that the idea will attract voters' support, although recipients of services may see the amendment as a step in the wrong direction.

Whatever taxpayers' lips say, their message is going to be read and it could have a profound effect on our state government in the 1990s and beyond.

Many ups, downs for bridges

By Bill Winter

Venice's efforts this summer to obtain funds to refurbish the McKinley Bridge bring to mind the basic dilemma the city faces — competition between Uncle Sam's free bridges and municipalities' toll bridges.

It's not a fight, especially when paying to cross the Mississippi River can get you a rougher traffic surface, not to mention the inconvenience of having to stop at a toll plaza to hand over cash or a ticket.

Of course, it wasn't exactly ideal for motorists before the era of free bridges. Madison's two-lane, 1920s-vintage Chain of Rocks Bridge had a sharp angle in the middle, and I covered a lot of serious and even fatal crashes there. Unsuspecting cross-country travelers often misjudged how dangerous the sudden turn could be.

The Madison bridge isn't used at all these days. After being closed in 1970, it was seen as a flea market site or entertainment center, but these ideas didn't become a reality.

Madison was among the first in this area to discover how lucrative it could be to serve a captive highway (Route 66) audience. It acquired the bridge from private owner in 1959 for what proved to be high profit for the city and numerous jobs for Madisonians.

In 1961, East St. Louis followed suit. It built an entirely new river structure, the Veterans/Martin Luther King Jr. Bridge. And in 1958, Venice bought the Illinois Terminal Railroad's 1910-era Venice-St. Louis span.

In the 1960s, President Dwight Eisenhower launched the Interstate highway system, and eventually the I-270 bridge was built only a couple of hundred yards north of Madison's bridge. It was opened to traffic in 1966.

I recall hearing Mayor Steve Mearas of Madison fussing about the federal government building a "fence" across the mighty river (near the hazardous Chain of Rocks reach). The fence was the 1-270 bridge, designed ingeniously and without much height because the official river channel had been moved to the eight-mile-long chain of Rocks Canal.

What is now known as the Pope John Bridge, carrying I-55, I-70 and I-64, opened in 1967 and the adjacent King Bridge saw its yearly vehicle volume drop from 13 million to two million.

Noting that East St. Louis was in default on its bridge debt, Mayor James E. Williams Sr. said in 1974 that Illinois, Missouri and the U.S. government were "direct offenders" in making it impossible to pay King Bridge bond holders.

King was acquired by the two states in the late 1960s, enabling it to be freed of toll. It is scheduled to be tied a little more closely into the interstate system in the future.

McKinley isn't physically quite as big as the Eads Bridge, but competition within the bi-state region limits its revenue — and the related ability to simultaneously finance maintenance/repair costs and bond principal/interest payments.

Now, Venice's Eads Bridge, a big success after being completed in 1874, began encountering financial problems nearly a century later, thanks to nearby Poplar.

In the 1960s Eads was traded by the Tennessee River Association for St. Louis city's MacArthur Bridge, and Eads will grow in usefulness when its low-or deck carries Metro Link light-rail commuter trains from Illinois into St. Louis tunnels connecting with elevated tracks.

Now, we could just get McKinley linked directly with north and south I-70 lanes in St. Louis, instead of facing stoplight congestion, who knows how bright its future might become?

Can nepotism get any worse?

To the editor:

Could we be lucky enough that the voters of Madison County will no longer accept patronage employment in county government?

The Supreme Court recently ruled that patronage in state government is illegal. Patronage employment promotes inefficiencies in government and promotes corruption. I feel the people in Madison County are entitled to have competent, qualified people working for the county, not party-appointed flunkies whose only claim to office is their affiliations and political contributions.

Patronage in government is bad, how much worse can nepotism in government be?

In my opinion, John Shimkus (Republican candidate for county treasurer) is correct when he questions Madison County Treasurer "Mick" Henkhaus' ethics in hiring members of his family to work for him in his office and for the county.

If Madison County wants good government, let's vote out patronage and nepotism and hire people to work for us who are qualified and have earned their positions based on personal merit.

I feel that we, the voters, have a right to a government that serves us, not the political victors, their friends and families.

Divorce means shared obligations

To the editor:

I am writing in response to a letter concerning divorced dads. I see divorced dads from a different angle than the writer. I don't believe anyone enters a marriage thinking it will end with divorce. By the time divorce comes, the home is not a happy one and often it is hard for the battling parents part. To some extent, everyone loses, with the children usually losing the most.

The lucky ones are able to reach some kind of understanding which allows the children to remain as much love and support as they need. I believe the majority are not lucky.

If there are no good, devoted and loving fathers, but are the exception, not the rule. When a father is bad, it is very difficult for a child to accept. They build up a fantasy dad in their mind and try to find and make excuses to themselves to explain and ease the pain of the bad dad's behavior. I don't think this is healthy and sometimes they need to face things as they are, even if it hurts.

Dads will say, "I'd like to call you a friend" or "I'm afraid your mother or her boyfriend/husband will just hang up on me" or "I don't know when you're home."

Dads will say, "I'd like to see you, but after I work all week I need my days off to relax," or "I need to spend time with the kids" or "I couldn't afford to take you anywhere." Just excuses.

Very often when dad gets a steady girlfriend or a new wife, the kids are virtually forgotten. Dad has a whole new family to worry about and the new wife and the old kids don't always love each other.

Many times the new wife sees the old kids as a reminder of the past relationship. She resents the money being taken from their pocketbooks to support the old. She doesn't see the weekend visits as a joy, but rather as a weekend spent babysitting the brats of someone she doesn't like.

Sometimes the problems with the stepmother encourage the Dad to back away from the children. The new stepmother is his enemy. He doesn't want to hurt his kids, but he wants his marriage to work. He may be a basically good man, who loves children, but his children will not come first.

There are many "fun time" dads. They're so worried about the kids that they don't think they never say "no" or stick around when it's time to punish them. They only see the kids when everything is OK and fun. If there's a problem, dad has an excuse. He doesn't feel well, no visit; he has plans with his friends, no visit; he had a bad day at work, no visit. Mom doesn't have this option. Her responsibility doesn't end because it isn't convenient. When dad backs out with an excuse, mom's left to carry the load.

When it's dad's time to have the kids, making arrangements for them should be his problem. He has the same option the mom does — get a sitter or take them with him. Having plans or being tired is not an acceptable excuse.

Divorced dads don't have it easy. Divorce complicates their lives the same as it does their ex-wives and children. Sometimes ex-wives are vengeful, but usually there's a reason. The reasons vary.

I think that when a mom starts talking bad about the dad, it stems from the frustration of being the parent who does most of the work and worry for the child, yet is unable to live up to the golden image of dad that the child has created in her head. She tries to knock golden dad from his pedestal by pointing out some truths about dad to the kids.

When dad misses visitation day to spend time with his friends, there's more than one way to look at it. He said, "I need time to relax and have a life of my own." That's true. But it is also true that he has a choice and he chooses his friends.

This can appear that he prefers the company of his friends. When dad complains to the kids about what a hardship paying child support causes him, it is really unfair that they know that the new car he's driving produces a car payment greater than his support?

Isn't sure it's wrong for Mom to bring this fact to her children's attention. They need to know their real dad and what he really believes is important, not fantasy dad with a dozen handy excuses.

Going to dad's shouldn't feel like a visit going to visit, it should feel like going home to dad, an extension of the home they have with mom.

Because dad moved out of the house doesn't mean he shouldn't be a part of his children's lives. If dad would stop making excuses and take his share of the responsibility and work of the children, mom wouldn't have the ammunition to knock him down with and she might lose the desire to try.

Permit expression of ideas

To the editor:

Efforts to pass a Constitutional amendment banning flag burning would be ill-advised. Punishing desecration of the flag dilutes the very freedom that makes this emblem so revered.

We don't need an amendment or statute to ban flag burning. We are aware that flag desecration is deeply offensive and touches the heart.

But if there is a bedrock principle underlying the First Amendment, let it be that government may not prohibit the expression of an idea simply because socially it finds the idea repugnant.

Trash cost up, service down

To the editor:

I believe it was Mark Twain who said, "The taxpayer is the only animal that you can skin more than once."

Well, the Granite City taxpayer has been "skinned" again. Most of our taxes were increased, and then the "city fathers" entered into a new waste hauling contract that provides for a 3.57 percent increase in costs, with an approximate 20 percent decrease in volume.

This decrease in volume was a result of the residential taxpayer being required to contract for and pay for his own yard clipping removal. What I feel is a further insult to the Granite City taxpayer is that our neighbor to the south, the city of Madison, will continue to provide yard waste hauling for its taxpayers at no charge.

I say to the mayor and aldermen of Granite City, or others who are responsible for this latest "fiasco": You should be ashamed of yourselves.

To the Granite City taxpayer I ask, "How many more times will we allow ourselves to be 'skinned' by those more interested in being re-elected than in providing fair value for our tax dollar?"

Nutrition requires education

To the editor:

I read with interest and concern your article describing the grocery trip taken to National. I'm sure their task was not easy but I am appalled that so many feel the problem lies in the amount of money food stamp recipients receive.

Perhaps it would've been more "fact finding" for these individuals who shopped to have been told to "observe," observe those food stamp recipients at the checkout line; not what various food products they choose.

The problem does not solely lie with having $15 to provide for a family of four (I know many elderly people who exist on far, far less than what is "governmentally" acceptable when it comes to groceries).

We may try to educate the underprivileged; however, they make their own choices when in the grocery aisle — much like you and I. Are they really concerned about nutrition? Do they plan menus and meals for the family in advance?

Do they really care if little Johnny gets the proper amount of fruit? Herein lies the problem: potato chips and snacks are chosen over fruits and vegetables — sweets and cakes over milk and dairy products.

We cannot make these choices for these people unless food stamps are colored or labeled "for fruit," "for vegetables," etc. Some will then become better educated as to nutrition and healthy foods; others will either not use the stamps or trade them for others among themselves.

I feel that sometimes those in positions of authority with the ability to change things cannot see the forest for the trees.

Eleven dollars a day for groceries is a moot point. It could be $50 a day and still individuals would not eat properly.

Dutch soccer teams taken in by local families

By Nicole Vaughn
Staff writer

GRANITE CITY — It's Sunday night. On Monday, 24 teenage soccer players and their four coaches will be arriving in St. Louis from Rotterdam, Holland. The group was supposed to have homes to stay at in St. Louis, but for whatever reason and at the last minute that option is no longer available.

What do you do?

If you're Vince Scrum, you invite them to stay with you. Well, some of them, anyway.

By the time the players and coaches arrived on July 2, the Belleville Select soccer team had held a parents' meeting. Scrum's son, Jason, 16, plays on the team. Belleville families took in the team of players under age 17 while Scrum, Jim and Carol Patterson and the Rev. Don Wolford, all of Granite City, and a Wood River family housed the under-19 team.

Scrum said it's been an interesting 1½ weeks. He and his wife Annette and son Jason have been sharing their home with four of the players. What's it been like?

"Chaos," Scrum said and then laughed. "No, really, they're very quiet and well-mannered. It's been great."

The players are members of the Independent Athletic Foundation. They raised $10,000 to $11,000 to make the trip to the U.S. Scrum said. Because Belleville Select hosted the Hollanders this year, Scrum hopes that his son's team will be able to visit Holland next year.

Scrum said his guests have hit all the area "hot spots."

"They've been waterskiing, swimming everywhere and went to Six Flags on Tuesday," Scrum said. "The visitors also attended the VP Fair and toured the Anheuser-Busch Brewery."

"Everybody has been very good to us," said Paul Van Loo, 19, the team's captain. "Everybody, you come you are welcome."

Today (Thursday) the players will be visiting the Gateway Arch and will attend tonight's St. Louis Cardinal baseball game against San Francisco. Tickets for the game were donated by the Cardinals and Monsanto, Scrum said.

Everybody, food, baseball games and just driving around are activities new to the Dutch teens.

The teens were shocked by the number of cars in the United States. Most Dutch families do well to have a car, they said.

"You can wake up, drive your car to McDonald's and just say 'Give me breakfast,'" Van Loo said. "In Holland that is unheard of."

The teens were also fascinated by the American education system. In Holland, youths choose a career and begin training for it around age 12 or 13, they explained. The schools also do not offer athletics but sports clubs are common.

"We have universities but only the very, very smart people go there," Danny Horsten, 18, said. "While there is no legal minimum drinking age in Holland, driver's licenses are very costly and difficult to get."

"You have to be 18 and you take about 20 lessons that cost about $25 each," explained Andre Boer, who turned 18 on Tuesday.

Shopping has also been a priority, as designer jeans and tennis shoes cost about twice as much in Holland as they do here, the players said.

The teens were also introduced to tacos.

"I kept trying to explain to them what they were but finally we just went to Taco Bell," said

The teens said that they found American girls to be prettier and that the country had a much faster pace of living and a different climate than Holland.

This place is just like in the movies," Van Loo said.

For the players and Coach Tom Horsten, the trip to the United States was a first.

"Coming from a small country, I'm surprised by the size of one state there are so many houses," Horsten said.

But Coach Walt Vandriel is a veteran visitor. He came to New Jersey as a player 10 years ago. Sportswriter, Vandriel said he found the U.S. a bit different than before.

"Soccer has improved," Vandriel said. "It's getting to be a big sport here. It will take time for America to get as good as Europe but they will get there."

The teams will be playing exhibition games this weekend at Belleville Area College in Belleville and a soccer clinic, open to the public, will be offered from 2 to 4 p.m. Saturday, Scrum said. The players, somewhat hesitantly, will leave for home Monday morning.

"Hopefully, we will come back and stay a lot longer," Boer said.

'High Noon' shootout ahead for GC Steel's American 'grandparent'

Where are Gary Cooper and other western heroes when we need them?

National Steel, parent of Granite City Steel, is doing well. But NSC's parent, owner, National Steel, is in a "High Noon" confrontation (actually 10 a.m.) July 25 at the Vista International Hotel in Pittsburgh.

A PROXY BATTLE has been raging for months, involving shareholders with conflicting information. Although stated mostly in business language, the clash has included sensational allegations.

If management prevails at the annual meeting of shareholders, "National Intergroup Inc. will be restructured to emphasize whole-sale pharmaceutical distribution, moved to Dallas and renamed FoxMeyer Corporation."

If dissidents win, NII is likely to be liquidated.

IT MAY NOT HAVE much effect on Granite City Steel, one of three divisions of National Steel Corp.; the other divisions are Great Lakes Steel (Detroit area) and Midwest Steel (Chicago area).

Nippon Kokan of Japan, already owning 50 percent of National Steel, is preparing to buy another 20 percent now, an added 10 percent in five years and 10 percent in 10 years.

This plan envisions 90 percent ownership by Nippon Kokan, a world leader in steelmaking and steel technology, with the other 10 percent to be held either by FoxMeyer or individuals.

MANY LOCAL OWNERS of steel stock nevertheless find their attention drawn to the NII ownership struggle.

Their pocketbooks are involved to some extent, and a central figure is Howard M. "Pat" Love, a former Granite City Steel president who is NII's chairman and chief executive.

Love also was chairman of National Steel but has just retired from that position. He has announced he will step down as NII chairman as soon as his restructuring is accomplished

Bill Winter.

(by March 31, 1991).

NATIONAL ALUMINUM already has been sold for a pre-tax gain of $30.6 million, with the opportunity to receive another $60 million in pretax gains out of contingent payments over the next decade.

Bull Moose Tube operations (in Missouri) have been sold for a gain of $17.9 million. A definitive agreement has been signed to sell Genix Enterprises at a pre-tax gain of $13 million.

And an agreement in principle has been signed to sell most of NII's interest in National Steel "on favorable terms, resulting in a cash-flow improvement of $30 million a year."

DEBT HAS BEEN SLASHED by 60 percent (or $265 million) over the past fiscal year.

NII directors on June 5 authorized management to "aggressively pursue the final steps of our restructuring program," including:

• Sale of the Ben Franklin Stores.

• Completion of a tender offer for Permian Partners.

• Payment of a special dividend or a buy-back of stock after completing the various asset dispositions.

• Closing of the corporate headquarters and transfer of a limited number of corporate functions to FoxMeyer's headquarters in Texas.

• Changing the company's name.

CENTRA PARTNERS, who have bought more than 16.5 percent of NII common stock, want to "reject any attempt by the board to lower the poison pill trigger, provide for confidential voting, require that all future

"golden parachute" contracts be submitted to stockholders for approval" and elect a board majority which then would terminate the company.

The dissidents say that "since the holding company structure was completed in 1983, it has suffered seven consecutive years of losses from continuing operations, aggregating more than $20 million, and has not paid any cash dividends to holders of common stock since the fourth quarter of fiscal 1988."

They say that from Jan. 1, 1984, through June 30, 1989, the market value of a share of common stock fell 51.4 percent while Standard & Poor's 500 index was increasing by 118.6 percent.

CHAIRMAN LOVE says the issues facing stockholders are:

• Should the board continue its restructuring efforts or should the job be turned over to new owners dedicated to liquidation?

• Should the firm grow and mature FoxMeyer, a company with improving operating margins and a strong position within a high-growth industry," or should Mr. FoxMeyer be sold?

• Should FoxMeyer's "growing earnings be sheltered with $130 million of net operating loss (NOL) carryforwards available to NII, or should the company forfeit those benefits by selling FoxMeyer now?"

A DISCOTHEQUE was among the past businesses of one of the leading dissidents. National Intergroup board members contend their rivals "have no proven track record in running a large, diversified public company."

Words and phrases that Love is using to discuss various dissident claims: bankruptcy, winding, closure, fines, out-of-court settlements, injunctions, misrepresentations, securities laws violations and fraud (not all allegations apply to all persons and not all are proven).

The other side says Intergroup has reneged on many promises. "It seems they really don't like each other very much."

State voters reading Lynn Martin's lips

By Jason Moody
Staff writer

WASHINGTON — Critics of U.S. Rep. Lynn Martin say President George Bush's reversal on his new taxes is a ploy to create a credibility gap for her U.S. Senate campaign.

"Bush has undercut the rationale behind Martin's candidacy," said Anita Dunn, a spokeswoman for the Democratic Senatorial Committee. "She planned to run a carbon copy, cookie-cutter version of Bush's presidential race but now she is in a whole new game."

Martin, a Loves Park Republican, says her opposition to new tax increases remains a cornerstone in her campaign, and Bush's reversal on the issue does not undermine her position.

"Martin is running against Paul Simon, not George Bush," said campaign spokesperson Kathy Lydon, referring to the Democratic incumbent in the race.

The question of credibility is between the two candidates, not the President. However, Simon's camp argues the electorate will be skeptical of any "no new taxes" pledges, given the hoopla surrounding the issue in 1988 and Bush's change of heart two years later.

During the 1988 presidential campaign, then-Vice President Bush made his famous "Read my lips — no new taxes" pledge. Last month, President Bush said "tax revenue increases" would be a necessary part of a deficit reduction agreement.

"She (Martin) can say 'no new taxes' until she is blue in the face and people won't believe it anymore," said Simon campaign aide Ellen Golin.

Illinois Republican Gov. James Thompson said the same thing (about taxes) and he raised them twice and now Bush is doing it," Golin added. "This certainly knocks away at her (Martin's) credibility."

Martin has said on several occasions that the President's new position would be a boon to her campaign because it would give her anti-tax views greater visibility.

"I didn't expect him (Bush) to do this, but it doesn't necessarily hurt my campaign," Martin said. "In fact, it helps in that it allows me to further differentiate my position as opposed to Paul's."

Most campaign experts say Bush's new position on taxes can only hurt Martin, but they disagree how much.

"She was developing this as a major theme in her campaign, and now people are going to be saying maybe your lips are lying too," said Larry Sabato, a campaign observer and politics professor at the University of Virginia.

"It weakens her position a little bit but it won't be a major factor come election time," said Dave Everson, a politics professor at Sangamon State University in Springfield.

"A lot depends on what kind of revenue package emerges from the budget negotiations and whether Bush can say the Democrats made him do it."

House to vote on airline ticket surcharge

By Tracy Corrington
Staff writer

WASHINGTON — A proposal to allow airports to impose a $3 surcharge on all airline tickets, which could generate up to $30 million a year for repairs at Lambert St. Louis International Airport, will be voted on this week by the House of Representatives.

The fee, called a "passenger finance charge (PFC)," has drawn varying degrees of support from St. Louis area representatives, but has the solid backing of Missouri Sens. John Danforth and Christopher "Kit" Bond, as well as Secretary of Transportation Samuel K. Skinner. Danforth and Bond are cosponsors of similar bills awaiting discussion in a Senate subcommittee.

Rep. Jack Buechner, R-Kirkwood, has said he will "probably" support the measure, but will wait to see what amendments are offered before he votes.

"I think I will probably support the head tax depending on (other provisions) because the money is essential for modernizing the safety equipment of U.S. airports," Buechner said.

"Eventually, Lambert is going to have to do some type of expansion and its only other alternative without this head tax will effectively be to issue revenue bonds which would board or switch planes in St. Louis."

Buechner said the current economic condition of TWA would severely damage the marketability of such bonds.

Rep. William Clay, D-St. Louis, has not announced how he will vote, but in the past he has opposed such a charge, said a Clay aide.

"Because of the regressive nature of the tax — all passengers would be taxed equally regardless of their ability to pay — the congressman has been against it," said Michele Bogdanovich, Clay's legislative aide.

The bill sailed through the House Public Works Committee last week with a voice vote.

The proposal would allow Lambert, and other airports, to tack up to $3 onto the tickets of all passengers who board or switch planes in St. Louis.

In exchange, Lambert would give up half of its federal entitlement, or roughly $4 million a year, said James Brown, who lobbies Congress on behalf of the airport.

"The PFC" would generate supplemental income for Lambert, up to $30 million. Brown said. "And all the money collected would go directly back to Lambert, thus bypassing the Federal Aviation Trust Fund."

The Federal Aviation Trust Fund is funded primarily by an airport terminal construction fee paid by passengers, said a spokesman for the House Public Works Committee. It is administered by Congress and currently has a $7 billion surplus, he said.

In the past, some congressmen, including Rep. Richard Gephardt, D-St. Louis, have pushed a bill to allow airports to authorize passenger fees until the administration releases money from the trust fund. They say it is being used to hide the actual size of the budget deficit.

I Corinthians 13:8 "Love never fails."

God is love. Love never fails. If we love with God's love, we will not fail. God's word is positive on this teaching. LOVE NEVER FAILS!

You can take any situation in life, no matter how impossible it seems, and apply all of your love to it and it will work out.

Try it in your marriage, job, with friends, etc. Be persistent. Start loving with all of your heart and watch the results.

When we love others as God has loved us, love will not fail.

Try love. Today.

Angela Zentgraf, Laura James, Mickey Williamson and goaltender Marilyn Kastner. All are from Granite City.

Other returning players include Shelly Sarach and Linda Korinek of Collinsville, and Lori Schutzenhofer — another seven-year veteran on the team — of Fairview Heights.

Key newcomers include Kelli Van Hoose and Mary Pat Beach, both of Collinsville. Van Hoose, a junior college All-America choice last year at Meramec, will play a sweeper. Mendoza says Leach, a key player at SIUE, will probably be a stopper.

Leach will be joined by SIUE teammates Lisa Pizzardi and Sue Clark. The other new faces on the team are Cheryl Stacey and Marta Scaturro of Granite City, and Brenda Hanchton of Edwardsville.

"We have players who can rotate around," said Mendoza, who is being assisted by Eric Mitchell and Mike Dixon. "Last year we lost 1-0 to North Shore for the championship. Our defense wasn't as strong, and it may have hurt us."

The Open Men's team will be looking for better success this year. Scott Bision (backfield) and Terry Dutko (goalkeeper) will represent Granite City for first-year coach Ed Gettemeier of Edwardsville, who took a glance at the team's vital statistics from 1989 and didn't like what he saw — a 1-1 record and a slim one-goal advantage (6-5) over opponents.

To avoid a similar showing, Gettemeier has loaded his team with a lot of weapons. And unlike recent years, he had plenty of players (more than 40 tried out) to choose from before eventually trimming his roster to 17. "I'm hoping we can finally make some waves in the open division," said Gettemeier, SIUE's assistant coach. "We think we definitely are a team that can medal, and with a couple of bounces we could win the thing."

1978 select squad gets 2nd in tourney

The 1978 Granite City Select Soccer Club took second in its division in the 1990 Watermelon Tournament in Rockford last weekend.

The team tied its first two games and won the final game, 2-1. Team members included Justin Bernaie, Brad Caudron, Jared Embick, Danny Floyd, Jeff Hayes, Scott Jones, Steve Logan, Matt McBride, Justin McMillian, Mark Mendenhall, Marvin Oze, Buddy Prazina, Danny Ray, Asa Scarborough, Jay Simpson and Jason Wilson. The team is coached by Ray Lopez.

Elks 80 has tryouts

The Elks 80 select boys soccer team will have tryouts at the GCC soccer field on July 14 from 12:30 to 2:30 p.m. and July 15 from 6-8 p.m. For more information, call 931-4691 or 931-7082.

relief of Jamie Needham (2-1) in the fifth to shut the door. The big righthander limited Cahokia to only one hit, while registering seven strikeouts in three innings.

"It's nice to get the lead and have Butch in there," said Burnett. "He's our only power pitcher and he can really bring the ball in the late innings. But Jamie pitched a nice game for us. He only made a couple of bad pitches and they knocked them out of the park. Otherwise, he did a good job of keeping the ball down."

The Triplets put the contest out of reach by scoring twice in the seventh. A sacrifice fly by Wallace and an error by third baseman Dale Daniel plated two runners.

"The total package is coming together," said Burnett. "Our pitching is sharp, our hitting is coming around and our defense is steady. We're reaching our peak at the right time with the playoffs only a week away. We can control our own destiny."

National Steel gets new chairman

PITTSBURGH — National Steel Corp. has announced a restructuring of its Board of Directors and the election of a new chairman and president.

National Steel is the parent company of Granite City Steel.

The actions follow finalization of the purchase of an additional 20 percent of the firm by NKK Corp. through its wholly-owned subsidiary NKK U.S.A. Corp. NKK now owns 70 percent and National Intergrupp owns 30 percent.

The size of National Steel's Board was reduced from six members to five, including three new board members. The new board of directors then appointed Kohichi Hagihara, formerly president and chief operating officer, as chairman and chief executive officer.

Ronald H. Doerr, formerly executive vice president, was elected president and chief operating officer.

Howard M. "Pete" Love, chairman of National Steel since 1981, was named honorary chairman and continues as a member of the Board. As honorary chairman, he will serve as a consultant to National Steel's management.

Other members of the board include Hagihara and the three newly-elected members, Doerr; Osamu Sawaragi, who will be appointed executive vice president of NKK, in charge of its Iron and Steel Division; and Yoshito Tokumitsu, National's vice president-distribution and services. Sawaragi will serve as vice chairman.

Leaving the board are Sachio Hori and Colville, executive vice president of NKK, who had served as vice chairman; James S. Pasman, Jr. and Stanley C. Ellspermann, president and senior vice president-administration of National Intergrupp Inc., respectively; and Masaharu Ito, executive vice president of National Steel. Ito is returning to NKK as a managing director.

Hagihara thanked Love for his leadership of National Steel as president and later chairman, noting that "his stewardship encompassed one of the most difficult economic periods in the history of the steel industry. We appreciate all that he has done for the company throughout the years."

National's new president, Ronald H. Doerr, noted that "with the ownership change completed and the revisions of the Board of Directors and senior management behind us, we can now concentrate on improving National Steel's performance."

"While we do not anticipate any major changes in our corporate strategies," he continued, "we have a renewed determination to become more efficient and more profitable, and to instill a stronger sense of unity throughout our organization."

National Steel Corp. is the nation's fifth largest steelmaker with production facilities in Ecorse, Mich., near Detroit; Portage, Ind., near Chicago; and Granite City.

The company is headquartered in Pittsburgh and employs about 12,000 people. It operates as a joint venture owned 70 percent by NKK Corp. of Japan and 30 percent by National Intergrupp Inc. In 1989, National Steel shipped 4,557,000 tons of steel and had sales in excess of $2.6 billion.

Entrepreneurs learn Opportunities for world trade great

EDWARDSVILLE — Opportunities for southwestern Illinois businesses to participate in international trade are great. Toni Vazquez, director of the U.S. international trade office in Mexico, told an audience of business persons attending a seminar in Collinsville.

The one-day seminar was sponsored by the International Trade Center of Southern Illinois University at Edwardsville, the Greater Southwestern Illinois Corridor Council and the Illinois Department of Commerce and Community Affairs.

"It is really an important time to move your business into the international area," Vazquez told the group, listing countries in the Pacific Rim, Eastern Europe, Russia, China and Mexico as potential markets for businesses in this region.

She said the time is definitely right for positioning in the world market. "These are times of shifting advantages," she said. "Pointing out some of the trade opportunities in Mexico, Vazquez said it is important for Illinois to be a part of that country."

She emphasized it is difficult to operate in another country without a base to work from. The trade office, which opened last December, contains offices, conference rooms, office equipment and personnel. "We want to make these facilities available to businesses in Illinois," she said.

Vazquez said Mexico is a country with young ideas. "The old standards don't cut it anymore," she said, adding that the younger generation is discarding old traditions. "They want to make changes."

The Illinois business office in Mexico is already working with 65 Illinois-based companies that wish to establish businesses in that country, and nearly 30 Mexican companies that want to conduct business in Illinois. For example, Vazquez said, Mexican companies are seeking warehouses to be utilized as distribution centers.

Vazquez said Mexico is particularly interested in the following kinds of industries:

- Transportation and distribution.
- Financial services.
- Telecommunications.
- Computer technology, particularly industrial software.
- Industries which make modernization possible.
- Medical products; and
- "High tech" and instrumentation.

"Don't worry about your products selling. Whatever you sell here will sell there," she told participants at the International Trade Fair.

Other speakers at the fair included Jack Moran, British American Forfeiting; Walter Oetiker, president of the International Trade Association; and several local business representatives.

Persons interested in learning more about the Illinois office in Mexico and trade opportunities in other countries may contact Susan Inslee, specialist at the SIUE International Trade Center, 682-2452.

IP's investment ratings downgraded

Three major ratings agencies have reviewed their appraisal of the investment quality of Illinois Power, in apparent reaction to recent news accounts about impending action affecting the company's rate request.

Moody's Investors Service carried the utility's preferred stock on its "watch list" with the rating "direction uncertain." On May 23 the advisory became "direction down." Two days later, Fitch Investors Service followed, changing its rating for debt as well as preferred stock — from "trend positive" to "trend negative." Both agencies are located in New York.

Chicago-based Duff and Phelps Inc. acted on June 4, downrating the preferred stock position from double "B" minus (BB-) to single "B." This rating places the company's stock further below investment grade.

The activity came during a period in which business journalists reported discussions by the Illinois Commerce Commission to sharply cut back the rate request filed by Illinois Power in 1989.

The ratings issued by these investment agencies affect the price of any future offerings by the company to outside investors. When the ratings go down, the risk to the investor goes up, and consequently the investor demands a higher premium from the company.

HONORED: Arnold Spiroff, right, receives award.

Federal employees honored by board

Arnold Spiroff, police officer of the Army Aviation Systems Command and a resident of Granite City, was the recipient of the Law Enforcement Employee of the Year Award.

The award luncheon's sponsor, the St. Louis Federal Executive Board, presented awards to the top employees in eight categories in June.

The awards program was dedicated to the memory of FBI Special Agent L. Douglas Abram, who was fatally wounded in the line of duty in January.
